HOW TO LOOK GOOD NAKED

The Little Black Gallery's Summer in the City exhibition showcases new British photography. Alistair Taylor-Young's floating nude arose out of his fascination with being suspended in time. Top right: Toby Smith's photograph was taken near his home town of Lincoln and inspired a project on cold war architecture across northern Europe. Bottom right: while in Scotland working on a project on renewable energy, Smith shot the tiny Tarbet Isle, off the shore of Loch Lomond. The exhibition runs until July 31.
